

CARSON AND THE LEGISLATURE.

If we of Carson had built a handsome iron fence around our square and improved the grounds in handsome shape in '71 and '72, the money so spent would have proved the best investment that we ever made with a view to retaining our advantages as the Capital of the State. It was a piece of effrontery for us to ask for an appropriation from the State for fitting up those grounds. Whether the premise was ever made by anybody authorized to make it or not, that we would enclose and beautify those grounds, it was piling on the extra feather, and breaking the back of the Legislature's patience to ask that the State pay for the improvements indicated. We overplayed our hand; that's what's the matter. We should have seemed to be liberal, rather than grasping, public-spirited rather than selfish, disposed to meet the State half way, rather than proffer in schemes to get the better of the bargain. We must bear in mind that it is a great piece of favoritism by which any one town is selected in preference to all the rest in the State, for the Capital. To be sure Carson is the best place for the State Institutions, but there is not another town of small dimensions and struggling fortunes in the State but that looks at her favored sister with more or less jealousy—and jealousy has its weight in legislation quite as much as gratitude or patriotism. We stinked for a Capital grounds appropriation, and lost the University; we have been liberal in our street improvements, and the State Prison is going away from us; we have done the foolish thing that every other Capital town always does, shown a disposition to ride a free horse to death. Now this kind of talk may not please certain people. It is not impossible that we are opposing the purpose of certain very earnest and very estimable gentlemen in saying what we shall say further, namely, that we think it will be an unwise thing to ask the State for an appropriation for a State Fair Society. We certainly do think so; and here are some of our reasons for so thinking, namely:

First, We do not believe we could get it, and

Second, We think that the business men of Carson ought to double discount Reno and invest at least twenty-five or forty thousand dollars in making our little city what it naturally is, the centering point of the agricultural and mechanical interests of the State.

Every dollar which we invest toward making Carson a point of attractiveness to the balance of the State is money well spent. The time has gone by when our pleasant location and handsome surroundings and improvements are seductive to the eye of the alkalied Saloon. The State is 10 years old, and there are other valleys where the cottonwood casts its gummy dew and its grateful shade; and there be metropolitan and capitoline ambitions larking about small oases and reclaimed saleratus beds; and for future benefits we must put forth the hoarded dollar where erst we reaped the harvest of the lobby. In other words, to restore to herself a part of her former, natural popularity, Carson must cease to court favors, and in so doing, must manifest a willingness and an ability to help herself and multiply her attractions. This done, and we shall no longer vainly invite the various political parties of the State to make this city their choice of a place for holding their conventions; no longer hear the Legislative Halls reecho to the sneering inquiry, "does Carson want anything?" no longer catch the voice of the Great East thundering its anathemas at our avarice and greed. Let us assume a virtue if we have it not—and be modest. Let's make our charms as many and obvious as possible and then wait to be courted.

PERSONAL.—Mr.—we mean General—Tebbs dropped in upon us yesterday. The last we heard of our chivalric friend Kittrell he was in the act of shaking the alkali from his feet and reaching on for Oakland—or Mudd Springs. It would be a fair exchange if Kit. were to pick up General Tebbs' abandoned business at that once flourishing city.

THE LATEST NEWS.

New York, Nov. 9.—A dispatch from New Orleans dated yesterday, says a very sharp letter to the War Department has been written by President Orton of the Western Union Telegraph Company, demanding why in time of peace their wires were cut, and the matter has been referred to Gen. Emery for report. Emery some days ago instituted inquiries, but to day detailed Gen. Henry A. Morrow by order of the Department to proceed there and make a special inquiry into all the circumstances.

Chicago, Nov. 9.—The Tribune this morning appears under the management of the Hon. Joseph Medill, and as a Republican paper. In an address to the readers of the paper, Mr. Medill briefly recites the many causes that led to his retirement from the Tribune, and speaking of the difference between himself and Mr. White says "they were always political, not personal," and adds: "My predecessor has pursued the course which he believed to be the path of duty, with a courage which challenged the respect of those who condemned it, and supported his views with an ability which extorted their admiration, and he leaves his editorial chair after having achieved a national reputation. The readers of the Tribune will naturally desire to be informed at the outset of the probable line of conduct of the Tribune under the change of management a full explanation cannot be given on the instant. Medill's opinions and actions are more or less influenced and controlled by the circumstances which surround them, and always by unforseen causes, but this much may now be safely promised. The Tribune hereafter will be as it formerly was when under my direction an independent Republican journal. It will be the organ of no man, however high; no clique or ring, however influential; nor faction, however fanatical or demonstrative. It will give the Republican party and its principles a hearty and generous support, and will criticize the actions and records of Republican leaders as fearlessly as in days of yore." He declares his firm belief that the errors of the party and misconduct of its agents can be corrected only within the party itself. As to political newspapers, he says: "A political newspaper, to be of service to the public, must give one party the preference, and while the Democratic party embraces many excellent and worthy members, who would be an honor to any organization, yet I sincerely believe the Republican party comprises a much larger proportion of the intelligent and educated classes of the moral worth and business enterprise, as well as of the patriotic elements of the Nation; and therefore, the government of the country and civil rights of the poor and weak can be more safely and prudently committed to its keeping, than to that of its antagonists whose past history and present conduct furnish so much cause for misgivings and dread of their future behavior."

The Inter Ocean's Washington special says some of Speaker Blaine's friends, much to the discomfort of those of Hamlin, are indicating that the former may leave the House in the latter. Friends of Hamlin admit that Blaine would make a good run.

The names most frequently used by Democrats in connection with the Speakership of the next House, are Fernando Wood, Samuel Randall of Pa., and Kerr of Indiana. The Star, after speaking in very complimentary terms of Kerr, says in all probability he will be the next speaker unless there is a combination against him.

Chicago, Nov. 9.—The Tribune's Washington special says that the propriety of the reorganization of the law providing for the organization of Congress on the 4th of March instead of the first Monday in December, is again suggested. In addition to the usual arguments in favor of such a law, the Republicans are seriously considering it because, they say, it will give the Democrats, who are in a majority in the new House, two long sessions, which will be ample time for them to handle themselves in.

The Tribune this morning figures the result of the legislative election in Illinois as follows: Senate—Republicans, 25; Democrats, 23; Independents, 3. House—Republicans, 67; Democrats, 64; Independents, 22. Ridgeway (Republican) is probably elected State Treasurer, through a division of the opposition vote between Gore (Independent) and Carroll (Democrat); but Elber, who was the candidate of both Democrats and Independents, is doubtless elected by at least 19,000 majority.

New York, Nov. 7.—Pennsylvania politicians say that Jeremiah S. Black will be elected United States Senator by the new Legislature of that State, while Massachusetts Democrats hope to predict the election of Charles Francis Adams by their new Legislature. The friends of Senator Fenton are not sanguine as to his election.

THE ENTERPRISE is out in a new dress. It looks clean and highly respectable, but presents a new and unaccustomed appearance that we don't like. In other words it don't look like itself—we can hardly tell why—but like an old acquaintance who has shaved his beard, or dyed his hair, or got a new set of dentist's baked teeth, the change is there and is not pleasant to meet.

IT IS THOUGHT that McGee and Ellison, Democrats, are elected to the Assembly from Nye county. McGee served one term in the California Senate as a member from Plumas county.

AN ADDITIONAL EPIPHANY.

That venacious vehicle of truth which is stranger than fiction, and fiction which is stranger than truth, the Reese River Reville, of November 6, tells its readers the following short but touching narrative of how a bride was wooed and won:

Out of regard for the feelings of the families of the parties concerned, we refrain from mentioning names which, however, are well known in this city. The couple had long loved; and, a short time since, the gentleman requested the hand of the lady in marriage, from her stern and cruel father, and was kicked down a long flight of steps for his presumption. Nothing daunted, however, by this cruel rebuff, the young man continued his attentions, and although often treated to showers of hot water by the maternal parent of his adored, and interviewed by the family dog to the extent of three pairs of pants, he still continued his attentions. The object of his affections viewed with heart-breaking sorrow the persecution of the idol of her soul, but was powerless to prevent them, as she was kept confined in a cabin in a secluded part of the town and kept from all communication with the unfortunate young man. Last week, however, the young man discovered the whereabouts of his beloved and managed to communicate with her, when she expressed a willingness to fly with him. On the appointed night the lover was on hand. The night was pitchy dark, and a gentle rain pattering on the roof prevented the stern parent of the girl from hearing the stealthy footsteps of the lover. Approaching the cabin, he drew his trusty pocket knife, and soon picked enough of the mud which filled the interstices of the logs of which the cabin is composed to enable the prisoner to crawl through. As the last flicker of her dress passed through the "chink" she fell in his arms, and throwing her on his shoulder he flew to the hills. When the old man awoke, next morning, the slopers had a winking of their own erected; and as the excited parent approached, with his bow and arrow cocked, and fire gleaming from his eye, the now husband threw his protecting arm around the waist of his bride and defied the old duffer. The husband settled the matter, however, by the payment of three ponies, a deck of greasy cards and a flannel shirt; a grand banquet of entrails was given at the slaughter-house, and as soon as the squaw gets over the honeymoon, she will be again ready to do washing by the day.
